This type of apparatus may be used as a single horse engine and is designed for Towns, Villages, Universities, Isolated Groups of Buildings, etc., etc. The same general description of use is applicable as for Heavy Department Engine.

Big Fire ON Broad Street

Wednesday, Oct. 14, at 4:30 P. M.

The Business and Insurance Men Are Urged to Attend This Demonstration

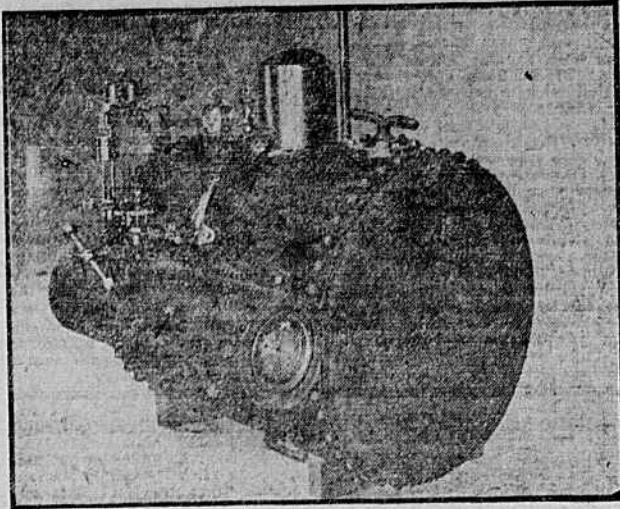

AS IT WILL SHOW A NEW METHOD IN FIGHTING FIRE

Our process contains no acid whatever; on the contrary, it is purely neutral solution, consequently it cannot injure flesh or fabric should it come in contact, and estimating that it costs no more to consumers than a comparative charge for a soda and acid apparatus, is certainly a feature to be considered by purchasers of fire appliances. We manufacture these chemicals into strong concentrated clear liquid, two gallons of which put into 100 gallons of water converts it into the most effective fire-extinguishing solution known, without the possibility of any precipitation of chemical residuums whatever, as is the case of the soda and acid process, caused by the soda crystal not thoroughly suspending in the water, and particles often pass out into the hose and block the outlet tubes, causing serious embarrassment to operators at a fire.

STATIONARY ENGINE.

This cut represents our Stationary Apparatus, designed for all kinds of Buildings (public and private), Theatres, School Houses, Skyscrapers, Steamships, Vessels, Factories, etc., etc.

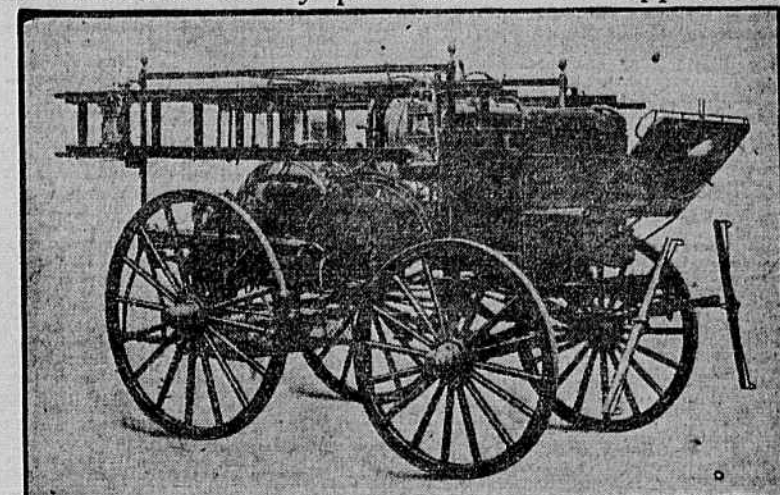

This special apparatus is placed on the lower floor and 1/4-inch gas pipes (extending to all parts of the building to be protected) are connected to the apparatus. There is a valve connected with as much hose required on each floor.

All the operator has to do is to push the button beside the valve (on whatever floor he is) and by electric and mechanical devices and attachments, the compressed air is released into the Chemical Tank, and, allowing 3 1/2 seconds for every 100 feet distance from the apparatus to the operator, there will be 100 pounds pressure of Chemicals at that point.

OUR PEERLESS ENGINE.

We manufacture this style of two-wheel Chemical Fire appliance in sizes from 25 to 75 gallons each. They are intended to be drawn by hand, and are especially designed to meet a long-felt want in small Towns and Villages, Mills, Valuable Detached Villas, Residences, Hotels at seashore and in the mountains, Lumber Yards, Railroad Depots, Stables, etc., etc.

OUR HEAVY DEPARTMENT ENGINE.

Chemical Tank, 100 gallons capacity; Three (interchangeable) Air Tanks; 250 feet of Special Hose, with improved Valve Nozzle; Two 24-foot Extension Ladders; One 1/4-inch Steel Bar; One Steel Fire Axe; Special Brake. Weight about 3,000 pounds when in commission.

News Gathered from Southside

Manchester Bureau, Times-Dispatch.

A prominent member of the Manchester and Chesterfield Business Men's Association said last night that it would be well represented at the smoker to be given by the Richmond Chamber of Commerce at the Jefferson Hotel auditorium next Thursday night. While the speaker was of the opinion that a large number of members of the Manchester organization had expressed themselves as more or less antagonistic to the proposed consolidation of the two cities, he nevertheless believed that all of them were open to argument on the subject, and looked forward with great pleasure to the smoker. The member quoted, who is a former City Councilman, expressed himself as very partial to Richmond and to her citizens. With regard to his attitude on the annexation proposition, he spoke of himself as being "in the fence," and declared that sufficient and sound reasons could incline him in either direction. He did not believe that he knew it all, and he was willing to be convinced.

The speaker stated that a representative delegation of Manchester business men would meet with members of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce Thursday night, on which occasion he looked for a pleasant exchange of courtesies and a discussion which would very probably lead to a better

Swansboro Politics. The political situation in Swansboro appears very encouraging to members of the Bryan-Kern Club of that place. Much enthusiasm is being developed in the campaign, and the Democratic presidential candidate has a large following. As indicative of the enthusiasm of the Bryan-Kern Club, Treasurer W. J. Morrisette, of that organization, yesterday forwarded the club's check for $50 as a contribution to the national campaign fund of the Democratic party. The Swansboro Bryan-Kern Club is enrolling new members every day, and is keeping well abreast of the campaign.

Small Fire on Seventh Street. The Fire Department responded yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock to an alarm turned in from 415 West Seventh Street, where a frame porch was found in flames.

The weatherboarding to the house was becoming ignited when the department arrived, and prompt action on the part of the chemical apparatus extinguished the blaze.

Sale Still in Progress.

The execution sale at the mercantile establishment belonging to M. J. Madrona, at No. 517 Hull Street, will be resumed by City Sergeant Saunders at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, when the stock of dry goods will be disposed of.

A large number of citizens attended the sale yesterday.

Make Richmond Pay Toll. A project is being put forward by Alderman H. C. Broadus and Councilman J. S. Wakefield whereby a new bridge is to be erected across the river by home capital exclusively, and over which Richmond citizens will be required to pay toll.

In discussing the matter yesterday both Councilmen said that Manchester had an eye on the requisite funds, and that under her charter she can erect the structure without any assistance from Richmond and require travelers from the larger city to pay toll.

Details of the project were not entered into by the Councilmen.

Sent On to Grand Jury.

Edward Easley, the negro youth suspected of stealing $150 from W. H. Kahn here last week, was sent on to the grand jury from the Police Court yesterday.

The street was committed last Friday at the slaughter house belonging to Mr. Kahn. The police are trailing a second party thought to be implicated in the crime.

AMUSEMENTS

Bijou—"Mr. Pipp."
Colonial—Keith's Vaudeville.

Phinney's Band.

As popular fancies, Shakespeare's plays and classical music are not sought after by the "frank and free" of theatre-goers. What the gallery, as well as most of those in the pit and boxes, want is rag-time, and plenty of it, red-hot march airs and an assortment of sentimental ballads of other days, as they are affectionately described. That this is true was proven last evening, when Phinney's Band awoke the echoes at the Academy, for while "the classics" were received with polite patience, a perfect furore broke out as the familiar strains of "The Merry Widow" were recognized. Again an insistent encore followed a song and dance effect on the xylophone, an air popular among the patrons of the Bijou on vaudeville nights, known as "He Has a Feeling in His Manly Heart for Me."

Mr. Phinney's band is a sterling organization, safe, conservative, sound and perfectly incapable of untoward mistakes. Compared with Sousa's musical organization, it suffers awfully, for one fails to find the dash and enthusiasm which carries off their feet even those who don't know "Home, Sweet Home" from "Taps."

Mr. C. Spary deserves words of praise for his trombone solo, when he played "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms." It was good.

The closing number of the program, "The Cavalry Charge," left nothing to the most picturesque imagination. There were "cavalry calls," cannonading, the clashing of sabres, the thunder of horses' hoofs, and the "crack-crack" of the revolver, so dear to the readers of "Deadwood Dick" series. As a descriptive selection, "The Cavalry Charge" has the "Siege of Prague," played by our grandmothers, beat more than a mile. It out-Bianys Bianys.

A well-filled house listened to the concert in the boxes were seen His Excellency, the Governor of Virginia, and His Honor, the Mayor of Richmond, as well as many of the musically-inclined.

At the end of the regular performance, the band, as an encore, gave "Dixie," which was greeted with great applause, after which the audience stood while the national anthem was played.

Mr. Phinney wore several medals and a pair of white gloves.

Vaudeville Season to Close.

The regular patrons of the Colonial Theatre will read with regret the announcement on this week's program that this will be the last week of Keith vaudeville at that house. Just why local theatre-goers have not shown their appreciation by better patronage is hard to tell, but the fact remains that the audiences have grown smaller and smaller, until the management decided to return next week to the moving picture show that filled the theatre during the summer months. It is earnestly to be hoped that the cessation of vaudeville will be only a suspension, and that before many weeks have passed the managers will give this form of entertainment another trial.

The closing week's bill is strong enough to appeal to the most ardent as well as the most blasé frequenter of the variety show, and doesn't contain a single weak or dull act. Coe & Boyd follow the overture with a few minutes of very entertaining music and comedy. The male member of the team is no stranger here. Charles E. Colby and Lilly May have a novel act, in which Mr. Colby does some clever ventriloquial work and Miss May does a doll dance that shows remarkable musical control, the mechanical effect produced thereby being very realistic. Arthur Whitelaw, an Irish comedian, is highly amusing in a monologue, with interpolated songs, and his local hits were well received. The headliners are Miss Viola Gillette and Mr. George MacFarlane, who present a twenty-minute potpourri of musical comedy and clever nonsense. Miss Gillette, a handsome and statuesque graduate from musical comedy ranks, now has a clear musical soprano, which she uses effectively, and Mr. MacFarlane, trained in the same school, has a baritone voice of range and tremendous power. Each appears in three changes of costume. O'Brien Havel and his partner, pretty Bessie Kyle, an old favorite of the Bijou Musical Comedy Company, kept the audience laughing and applauding during their turn. Miss Kyle, a capable foil, never looked prettier or sang more sweetly. Stanley and Mabel Russell, a diminutive couple, proved to be clever conversationalists (though vaudeville performers insist on calling themselves conversationalists), graceful dancers and excellent mimics. The three Renards present an act which, though old, is hard to beat. The acrobatic performance of two are executed on apparatus suspended by the teeth of the third. "Mr. Pipp."

Charley Grapevine at the Bijou is still on the job, with the same old gag and the same old morning-after scene, that keeps you on the laugh from start to finish.

Everybody knows the story of the awakening of Mr. Pipp, and the older it grows the funnier it gets.

Every member of the company is good. Anna-Chance, as Mrs. Pipp, is even better than last season, easily sharing the "honors" with the star. Tillie Sallinger, as Pipp's mother-in-law, is all right as far as mother-in-laws go. Eddie Gorman, alias Mugsy, the messenger boy, helps carry much of the comedy, and is always there with the goods.

Grace Bessement as Tessie Tiptoe, and Edwin Genury, who plays the part of Reggie Payne, do a dance in the third act, that has put the "Merry Widow" in the shade, and keeps the audience going some.

A few of the songs are new and the chorus good to look upon, going and coming.

The "Awakening of Mr. Pipp" is a sure cure for that tired, grouchy feeling. It goes with a scream and belongs to the "hurrah for the red, white and blue" variety.

Great Theatre for Nordica.

From present indications the Academy of Music will be filled to its capacity when Marie Lillian Nordica appears Monday, October 13th. Mme. Nordica's fame rests to a large extent upon her splendid work in Wagnerian roles.

The singer's early operatic successes were scored in Europe, her debut in St. Petersburg and Paris creating veritable sensations. Her London debut came on the stage she faced a tenor who had never laid eyes on before—one whom she emphatically states she hopes never to lay eyes on again. To add to the general discomfort of the situation, the theatre was so cold that many in the audience wore their wraps, the Prince of Wales among the rest being enveloped in a fur coat.

That night Mme. Nordica, in her thin gowns as Violetta, was obliged to face another chill in addition to the one caused by the tenor. The ensemble numbers were ruined, but she sang her aria so effectively that the next day her artistic success was established in England.

WATERS-PIERCE OIL CASE

Texas Attorney-General Asks That Appeal Be Dismissed.

WASHINGTON, October 12.—A motion to dismiss the appeal of the Texas State courts, ousting that company from doing business in Texas, was filed in the Supreme Court of the United States to-day by Attorney-General Davidson, of Texas. The motion is based on the ground that there is no substantial Federal question involved in the case, as the laws which the oil company is charged with violating are purely State statutes, with which the United States courts are not concerned. In case the motion to dismiss is not granted, the Attorney-General moves to affirm the Texas verdict, pleading that if there should prove to be "the color of a Federal question, it is wholly frivolous and without merit." The State laws which the oil company is accused of violating are the antitrust laws, and the offense charged is a combination with the Standard Oil Company.
